During an acute attack of Bronchitis, a ceaseless tickling in the throat, and an exhausting, dry, hacking cough, subject the sufferer. Sleep is banished, and great prostration follows. This disease is also attended with Hoarseness, and sometimes Loss of Voice. It is liable to become chronic, involve the lungs, and terminate fatally. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral affords speedy relief and cure in cases of Bronchitis. It controls the disposition to cough, and induces refreshing sleep.

I have been a practicing physician for twenty-four years, and for the past twelve, have suffered from annual attacks of Bronchitis. After exhausting all the usual remedies,

Without Relief.
I tried Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. It helped me immediately, and effected a speedy cure.—G. Stovall, M.D., Carrollton, Miss.
Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is decidedly the best remedy, within my knowledge, for chronic Bronchitis, and all lung diseases.—M. A. Rust, M.D., South Paris, Me.

I was attacked, last winter, with a severe cold, which, from my want of sleep, and finally settled on my lungs. My night sweats were reduced almost to a delirium. My sleep was restless, and I frequently spit blood. My physician told me to give up business, and I would not live a month. After taking several remedies without relief, I was finally two bottles of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I am now in perfect health, and able to resume business after having been prostrated for nearly a month. (Sample.)—S. P. Henderson, Nashville, Tenn.

For years I was in a decline. I had weak lungs, and suffered from Bronchitis and a cough. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral started me to life, and I have been for a long time completely vigorous. In case of a sudden cold, I also resort to it. Perfect relief and speedy cure.—Edward H. Curtis, Fort Hall, Id.

Two years ago I suffered from a severe Bronchitis. The physician attending me told me to give up business, and I would not live a month. After taking several remedies without relief, I was finally

SLATE PENCILS.

An Interesting Description of the Way in Which They Are Made.

Broken slate from the slate quarries is put into a mortar run by steam and pounded into small particles. Thence it goes into the hopper of a mill which runs into a "bolting machine," such as are used in flouring mills, where it is "bolted," the fine, almost impalpable flour that results being taken to a mixing tub, where a small quantity of stearate flour similarly manufactured is added, together with other materials, the whole being made into a stiff dough. This dough is kneaded thoroughly by passing it several times between iron rollers. Thence it is conveyed to a table where it is made into "charges"—that is, short cylinders four or five inches thick and containing eight to twelve pounds each. Four of these are placed in a strong iron chamber, or resort, with a changeable nozzle, so as to regulate the size of the pencil, and subject to tremendous hydraulic pressure, under which the composition is pushed through the nozzle in a long cord, like a slender snake sliding out of a hole, and passing over a sloping table set at right angles with the cords, to give passage to a knife which cuts them into lengths. They are then laid on boards to dry, and after a few hours are removed to sheets of corrugated zinc the corrugation serving to prevent the pencils from warping during the process of baking, to which they are next subjected in a kiln, into which superheated steam is introduced in pipes, the temperature being regulated according to the requirements of the article exposed to its influence. From the kiln the article goes to the finishing and packing room, where the ends are thrust for a second under rapidly-revolving emery wheels, and withdrawn neatly and smoothly pointed, ready for use. They are then packed in pasteboard boxes, containing one hundred each, or ten thousand pencils in a shipping box. Nearly all the work is done by boys, and the cost, therefore, is light.—Fourville Outlook.

HYPNOTIC TRANCES.

Their Successful Application as a Medium in Many Critical Affections.

At a recent meeting of the Societe de Biologie, MM. Pontin and Segard read an interesting paper on the applications of suggestion to therapeutics. The writers have collected a hundred cases in which they have availed themselves of the possibility of putting their patients into a hypnotic state to suggest a partial or entire cure. Their conclusion is that suggestion may be of great value in cases where disorders of the motor or sensory powers exist or even where there are anatomical disorders affecting the circulatory or secretory systems, such as follow upon traumas or upon general diseases, such as them the diphtheria and others. They have employed hypnotic suggestion in cases of traumatic neuritis, cerebral shock, meningitis, dyspepsia and acute rheumatism with good results, in most cases having been able to effect a complete cure in from three to six sittings. It may be added that none of the patients were at all hysterical. From a perusal of the observations quoted by the gentlemen named, it would seem that the influence of the mind on the body is greater and deeper than has hitherto been imagined. The way in which MM. Pontin and Segard operate is very simple. The subject is put into a hypnotic trance (only three percent of the patients are refractory to this part of the process), and is told, for instance, that his knee (in case of hydrarthrosis or arthritis) will work easily and without pain, or that (in case of dyspepsia) the most indigestible foods will be easily digested. Generally the cures have been effected in a progressive manner, the disappearance of one symptom being suggested at the first sitting, that of some other at the next, and so on.—Paris Letter to Science.

THE BRIDGE OF SIGHS

One of the Most Intelligent Things from an Architectural Standpoint.

I turned toward the little arch off the piazza, from which I could see the much talked of Bridge of Sighs. I confess I was rather disappointed on beholding it. Certainly I did not expect to find a Brooklyn or a suspension bridge in its structure, but I thought that it would at all events be a decent kind of thing architecturally. Here, for instance, was the inevitable canal flanked on one side by the dual palace and on the other by the dual forbidding walls of the prison. The fourth story of either edifice was connected by an insignificant looking bridge—and this is the bridge known in history as the Bridge of Sighs—some seven feet long by three broad—to which I was referred, where, in his "Child of Hanoi," he exclaims:

"A palace and a prison on each hand."

Why, you might ask, did the structure receive such a dismal title? Well, in old times here, when any prisoner was arrested he was, first of all, taken to the vaults of this gloomy prison. Next day he was escorted over the bridge to the judicial chambers of the palace, where he was tried and judged by the Doge and his College of Ten. If he were acquitted he was shown out the front door of the palace and immediately released. If he were found guilty, he knew that his doom was sealed, and back he had to trudge across the bridge—sighing and groaning, to the prison where a trumpeted wail to engulf him in the ink of the prison's dread water barrel. Was not that the age of chivalry when the crime of trading on a victim's little life was punishable with death? And were not the canals there there to receive their burdens of victims?—Emilio Cor. San Francisco Chronicle.

Saved His Life

Mr. D. J. Wilson, of New Haven, Conn., says he was, for many years, badly afflicted with Rheumatism, also Diabetes, the pains were almost unendurable and would sometimes almost throw him into convulsions. He tried Electric Bitters and got relief from first bottle and after taking six bottles was entirely cured and had gained in flesh eighteen pounds. Says he positively believes he would have died had it not been for the relief afforded by Electric Bitters. Sold at fifty cents a bottle by J. A. Swearingen.
